Happy Easter to everyone! We hope that the chocolate and food was only one highlight of your Easter weekend. We enjoyed family time, a movie and too much food thanks to Grandma. We are enjoying having Jake home from Billings, Montana. We have put him to work on property renovations, for the month of March. One month home and he is already eager and ready to train for the fall. Spring camps are getting under way and specific ones will be chosen. He continues to move forward with his hockey career and to explore the opportunities that are before him. Dreams and goals must be true to one self.

Paige will celebrate her ninth birthday, this month, and she also will have several dance competitions. She is such a happy, content, positive child. Life with her can only bring joy. Truly she is beaming from morning till night and always carries her big smile. She loves having her brother home and going for rides in his truck. She enjoys the outdoors, bikes, scooters and neighborhood friends. Next goal for Paige...summer holidays.

Wow! March had to have been the most productive month of the year. It is truly amazing what one is able to accomplish when they directly focus on the task ahead of them. Pressure can either be deemed negative or used constructively to reflect our true capabilities. In most instances, the way in which we perceive a situation has direct correlation to the outcome. Think about that for a moment...if we view an incident as bad then in our own mind it cannot end any other way. No good is ever possible. If we look at the same incident and say that possibly we could learn something or are able to change things that need to be adjusted, the perspective has changed. Here is the most important secret I can ever share with you: Try to envision most events, interactions and situations concluding in a positive manner. Even when you are sure that it will not be good...envision the good. Trust me. I must profess that incorporation of the positive can have only that effect back upon you.

EDUCATION

As illustrated, education or educating ones self may be as simply beginning by altering the way we view our daily interactions and feeling to the way we do business with colleagues. One noteworthy point is that no matter who we are today we are always able to learn and grow for tomorrow. Picture the future...feel reassured that a positive you will be resonating to others. And in return you shall feel the same.

This is definitely one of the most valuable business tools that a person could have. This does not mean that a person is a "push over" however business matters are better dealt with on a positive agenda. The outcome definitely will be more favorable to all those involved.
